A seamless platform powers explosive growth.

Members Choice Financial Credit Union in Danville, PA, knew that diversifying into indirect lending could help it weather economic downturns. After all, as Victor Tsui, COO, put it: “People don’t stop buying cars.” However, the traditional credit union platform it had chosen in 2011 for indirect auto lending wasn’t performing. “The LOS was inefficient and it wasn’t bringing in the app volume, maybe because dealers had to pay to use the service,” said Tsui. The credit union researched other options and decided to relaunch its program using Dealertrack’s Credit Application Network and one of Dealertrack’s many LOS partners for seamless integration between the two platforms. At the same time, it established a two-person indirect auto loan department to oversee their program and the overall process.

With the platforms and back-end processes in place, Members Choice saw explosive growth. Its auto loans grew over 78% in 2015, earning it the rank of #41 out of over 6,000 credit unions in 12-month auto loan growth, as reported by the Callahan Credit Union Directory.

The Dealertrack system was widely used in the area, helping to open doors so the credit union had 30 active dealer partners within a short time. Application volume went up without any corresponding increase on the back-end thanks to built-in system automation. Most importantly, due to complete integration with its LOS and a decisioning process that took just minutes, the credit union won more loans and its indirect channel became its most profitable.

“You cannot comprehend such volume and speed without Dealertrack,” said Tsui. “Without it we wouldn’t be able to do anywhere near what we’re doing.”
